

Impact of Smartphones

Smartphone technology has become a significant element in each individual's life. The reason for its sudden rise was due to its sudden evolution. Though it has its positive and negative impacts.

The telephone has become the first piece of technology that has created a bridge between people. People felt happy about this, and it reduced the distance between people. The only problem they found in it was that it wasn't portable.

This problem was dealt with by introducing mobile phones into the market. Everyone was so happy about them as they were portable and easy to carry, unlike the telephones it made communication more accessible and better. In this era, India was introduced with the internet for all the consumers and then the release of the 3g mobile phones that support surfing through the internet. everyone thought this evolution can't go further.

the next-gen of phones was released after a while with the introduction of the network, and these changed our lives in some aspects in which some are beneficial and others disadvantageous. These devices helped us a lot during this pandemic time. They gave us the ability to keep the physical interaction with each other as little as possible with the introduction of mobile payments and internet banking with exclusive new features and much more services in the comfort of your pocket. However, the disadvantageous things were social media, which made all the people, especially teens, addicted to mobile. Many people started wasting their time on these devices and forgetting that there's a world beyond this. But still, we can't imagine a world without communication.so, smartphones contributed to us a lot.
